

Case #62 Missing Persons

Client: Donna Voight

Billing: Waived

Ms. Voight approached me regarding her missing boyfriend, a U.F.O. fanatic who recently shifted his focus to Leprechauns. <sup>Yellow</sup> ~~Real~~

We visited Ms. Voight's boyfriend's apartment in search for clues of his whereabouts. Inside of his desk was a simple wooden box containing a small piece of magical gold (or orichalcum - as Albert Frankenstein named it in the past) and a note with coordinates.

Ms. Voight mentioned that her boyfriend mentioned that Leprechauns changed colors since the 'White Event', the little ~~green~~ men were now yellow - and acting strangely.

FIND OUT MORE
I traveled 2 hours out of the city to the location where Ms. Voight's boyfriend located his piece Orichalcum. There was a strong leyline presence near the location. I started to dig and was attacked by strange being about half an hour into my dig - I hit it with my shovel, and a few bullets which seemed to have no effect. The being did not appear to be quick enough to chase me, so I left the leyline for a short break and returned to continue my dig. <sup>(Thankfully)</sup> The being had left. I dug until I found a genuine pot of ~~gold~~ orichalcum.

About half an hour after locating the orichalcum, a strange ship that can only be described as a cliché U.F.O. arrived and a little yellow Leprechaun came out brandishing a magical wand. The Leprechaun attacked me, and I was forced to attempt to disarm him by shooting his wand out of his hand. Unfortunately, the wand exploded and knocked me unconscious. DON'T SHOOT WANDS

I woke up in a strange webbing of sorts hanging upside-down from a tree with all my possessions missing. I escaped from the webbing and discovered I had been transported to the magical lands. There were other webbings around me with living people inside of them. As I tried to rescue one of the other prisoners I was confronted by a Nymph, Dephora. Dephora offered me <sup>drugged</sup> food and water and explained her duty was that of a guardian (I have since learned she was not guarding me for my safety - but for future consumption). After Dephora attempted to drug me I <sup>never accept food from a fairy!!!</sup> distracted her and took the opportunity to run away. She nearly caught up to me, but I managed to get away.

Traveling through the nearest leyline I found myself in Japan. I <sup>figure out leyline!</sup> contacted Quentin Mechanics for assistance in leaving the country as I had not entered the country in a legal manner. <sup>(it took me longer to fly)</sup>

Upon my return to the States I geared up for a rescue mission. The Nymph had other prisoners who needed to be saved, and only I knew where to find them. <sup>"magic land" - what is it called?</sup> I lead a team of techs to the (now empty) orichalcum cache and traversed through the leyline with some surveillance equipment. I was ambushed by some brutal savages with massive bows and spears, wearing war paints and the remains of other living things - including human flesh. After quickly defeating the savages I traveled back to Dephora's camp where I found two prisoner-sacs remaining. Dephora intended on ambushing me, however I quickly disposed of her with a incendiary grenade and a few hollow-point steel jacket bullets and rescued the two remaining prisoners. <sup>face killing</sup>

Unfortunately, Ms. Voight's boyfriend was not among the survivors...